At the same time the Libyans were reported to have ordered their troops in the new-defunct Arab League peace-keeping force in Beirut to join the PLO forces in their fight against Syria.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat yesterday sent messages to Arab heads of state urging them to attend a pan-Arab summit conference planned to discuss the Lebanese situation at the Cairo-based Arab League headquarters next Monday. Fears in Cairo that the summit gathering would be called off followed a Damascus announcement that Syrian President Hafez Assad would stay away from the Cairo gathering. Assad's closest ally, Jordan's King Hussein, also has decided not to attend, according to reports from Amman.

The tough statement was believed aimed also at the Soviet Union, whose Communist Party newspaper "Pravda" yesterday issued a renewed demand for Syria's withdrawal from Lebanon and for the restoration of Soviet ties with the PLO-Leftist camp to confront Israel. The paper's commentator Yuri Chichikov said that Israel was now stepping up direct military intervention in the Lebanese conflict and was fighting alongside Lebanon's rightist forces.

Ford: 'Arms delivery may take some time'

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — President Gerald Ford yesterday disclosed that two of the four weapons systems approved for sale to Israel this past week have not yet been introduced into the American military arsenal and that, consequently, delivery of those items to Israel "may take some time." He did not name the systems.

Meeting with representatives of the American Jewish Press Association and The Jerusalem Post at the White House, the President said that he personally had reviewed Israel's request for U.S. arms, and that his decisions are later implemented by the U.S. Department of Defense.

Ford said that the four systems he approved for Israel "are very sophisticated, very modern," adding that he did not believe there are going to be significant requests by other nations for weapons system of that category.

UPI yesterday cited "informed government sources" as predicting that Israel will never receive the new arms that Ford has promised to sell them. The sources said the "concession bomb" and infrared detection system are expected to run into serious obstacles when Congress returns in January and the review of the weapons deal begins. Seeking to reassure Israel supporters here, the President also made these points during a 30-minute question-and-answer session:

- Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter has made only "promises" regarding his support for Israel, while Ford can show "performance." He accused Carter of making contradictory statements regarding Israel.
- The U.S. would consider moving the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as part of an overall Arab-Israeli settlement. Ford said to make such a move "unilaterally at the present time" would be a "mistake." He continued: "But as part of an overall settlement, I think it is a matter that could and should be considered."
- Any Middle East settlement "should come from direct

Accountant held 5 more days Police: We think Yadlin took bribe

TEL AVIV. — The remand of Kupa Holim chief accountant Meir Kimhi was extended yesterday for five days — in a hearing at which police said they believe Kupa Holim head Asher Yadlin is guilty of taking a bribe in connection with a Kupa Holim land deal.

The police added that they had no proof of bribe-taking against Kimhi or Yadlin, who is due at the end of the month to become Governor of the Bank of Israel. In rejecting a police request for a 15-day extension, Magistrate Haim Shapiro stressed his displeasure that only Kimhi has been arrested in the case.

During the two-hour hearing, police investigator Reuven Weinstein told the court that new evidence had been found which linked Kimhi personally with bribe-taking and with offences connected with Kupa Holim's purchase of land for a medical centre in Tel Aviv from South American investors. He is also suspected with others of fraud, and further arrests are expected, Rav-Paked Weinstein said.

Stressing that this is one of the most difficult investigations the police have ever conducted, involving "crafty businessmen and lawyers," the policeman said Kimhi is not cooperating. The 50-year-old accountant is not answering questions and might harm the investigation if released, Weinstein said.

Under questioning by Kimhi's attorney, Arye Kamari, Rav-Paked Weinstein acknowledged that the police had offered to release Kimhi and give him immunity if he would turn state's witness.

Kamari then asked: "Isn't it true that they told Kimhi they weren't interested in him but in Yadlin and others, and didn't they even say 'why should you go inside for them'?"

Weinstein: "I didn't hear that. Yadlin's name didn't come up in any particular context but in connection with the whole case. We aren't conducting an investigation 'against' but trying to get the truth about all kinds of criminal acts — at Kupa Holim. Because Yadlin was its head, we were also interested in him."

Kamari: "Yadlin is the tip of the iceberg. Besides him there are the division heads in the Kupa." Weinstein: "There are other suspects. I'm not going into them now."

Kamari: "The investigation is against Yadlin and not basically against Kimhi. Are you afraid to open your mouth and say the name 'Yadlin'?"

Weinstein: "The name Yadlin is mixed up in the information (we have received). We are working intensively to finish the investigation."

Kamari: "Because Yadlin is the main suspect and there's a deadline about his appointment as Governor (of the Bank of Israel)."

Weinstein: My orders are to finish the investigation quickly. We have therefore been ready to pay a price for help. The idea of granting Kimhi immunity was not to entrap others but to shed light on the case."

After complaining that his client was still being questioned even though Kimhi had made it clear he would not answer questions as long as he was held, Kamari next asked outright: "Do you think that Asher Yadlin took a bribe in this case?"

Weinstein: "Not he alone, but he and others, among them Kimhi." Kamari: "Do you have evidence from persons now living that Yadlin received a bribe?"

Weinstein: "There is no hard evidence at this point."

Kamari: "Is there such evidence about Kimhi?" Weinstein: "There is no evidence."

Kamari then said that the medical centre deal had been signed by Yadlin and the Kupa Holim financial chief, not by Kimhi. To this Weinstein responded that Kimhi had been directly involved, and added: "Yadlin has been questioned on this. I'm not going to give details."

Asked why Kimhi and not others were being held, the policeman answered: "Because of the needs of the investigation."

At this point Judge Shapiro intervened and said that he could not accept such an explanation. Weinstein answered: "It was decided at this stage only to arrest Kimhi — due to considerations which do not depend on me."

Kamari then asserted that the reason was that the police were trying to break down Kimhi, because they saw him as the weak link in the chain. Weinstein refused to go into the details, noting the presence of journalists in the courtroom.

Judge Shapiro, angered at his answer, said: "It seems to me that the officer has deprived me of the possibility of weighing whether there are special grounds which would justify detaining this suspect and not others. As no such grounds have been offered, I must assume they do not exist."

He nevertheless decided to extend remand — for five days rather than 15 — due to the gravity of the accusations.

Yadlin reply on A-G report due tonight

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT, Jerusalem Post Reporter

Premier Yitzhak Rabin and his top colleagues yesterday put the ball into Asher Yadlin's court, by sending him the Attorney-General's legal opinion on the police's interim findings in the investigation into his alleged malfeasance. Premier Rabin is expected to put a proposal to the Cabinet at its weekly meeting on Sunday regarding Yadlin's candidature as Governor of the Bank of Israel, in the light of Yadlin's reaction.

Yadlin told an Israeli Radio reporter that he expected to react by tonight. At present director-general of the Mizrahi's Kupa Holim, he has been named Bank Governor and is due to take up his post on November 1, provided President Ephraim Katzir approves the nomination. However, the Cabinet decided after he was nominated to press investigation against Yadlin, in the light of allegations that he used his position in Kupa Holim to win material benefits from transactions, mainly in property.

Some observers speculated last night that Yadlin's reaction to Attorney-General Aharon Barak's legal opinion would be to decline to stand as Bank Governor. According to this view, "Premier Rabin's purpose in sending Yadlin the opinion was 'to get him to take the Cabinet off the hook,' thus making it unnecessary for the Cabinet to strike Yadlin's candidacy down unilaterally, and so appear to be prejudging the case."

Other observers suggested, however, that Yadlin, after consulting with his legal counsel, might equally decide to say nothing about withdrawing his candidacy as Bank Governor, and point out that there was no evidence that he had committed any criminal offence. This would throw the ball very sharply back into the Cabinet's court and force the Cabinet to oust him.

The Attorney-General's report was prepared in day-long consultations with police on Wednesday and presented to Justice Minister Haim Zadok yesterday. Zadok forwarded it to Prime Minister Rabin. The contents of the report, which is said to be short, were not revealed.

Elison's testimony may incriminate higher-ups: Yadlin

Asked by Israel Radio reporter

Asher Schwartz last night what he thought of Mordechai Elison's claim to have material sufficient to incriminate many people, Yadlin replied that, from what he knew of Elison, he was convinced that the material did not apply to Kupa Holim or to himself, but rather to personalities and political bodies which he described as occupying "the most central positions in the state." He would have no objection, he said, if Elison were granted immunity and the status of state's witness.

Sussman, Gafny mentioned for Bank of Israel Governor

By GIDION ESHET Jerusalem Post Reporter

Asher Yadlin will probably not be the next Governor of the Bank of Israel. This evaluation is now shared by most political and economic sources, although the ministers concerned have refrained from making public statements.

The reasoning behind this view is last night's meeting between Attorney-General Aharon Barak and Yadlin, in which it is thought Barak presented the police case against Yadlin. Although it appears that the case is yet not strong enough for an indictment, it is sufficient to block the nomination on ethical grounds.

The names of three candidates are now being mentioned for the governorship:

- Dr. Zvi Sussman, head of the research department in the Bank of Israel, who is ending a year's work with the International Monetary Fund.
- Sussman is much appreciated by the Finance Minister and the Minister of Justice. He is a highly qualified economist well known for his integrity, and he has no enemies. His weak point is that he is not a politician and it is thought by many that the governorship needs political standing.
- Arnon Gafny, Director-General of the Finance Ministry. He has the same qualifications as Sussman, but with a weaker academic background. He is also more involved in political affairs, mostly because his present job requires it. Gafny is known to want the job; but his minister, Yehoshua Rabinowitz, has refused in the past to let him go. If he gets the governorship, Rabinowitz will have to find a new director-general — which is not an easy task.
- MK Adi Amoral, a member of the Knesset Finance Committee. Several ministers have already approached Amoral on this subject, but it is yet unknown whether Rabin, Rabinowitz or Zadok — who will make the decision — were among them. Amoral is reluctant to take over the governorship.

Some observers believe Gafny will be appointed governor and Amoral will be named deputy Finance Minister, to strengthen the Treasury team. (The earlier-mentioned potential candidacy of Eliezer Shetter, director-general of the Bank of Israel, has been dropped.)

Solel Boneh man to turn state's evidence

By YAA'COV FRIEDLIE and ARTHUR KEMELMAN
Jerusalem Post Reporters

HAIFA. — A breakthrough appeared to have been made in the Asher Yadlin investigation yesterday, after a former senior executive of Solel Boneh, Mordechai Elison, expressed his readiness to turn state's evidence, in return for being granted immunity.

If the police and attorney-general Aharon Barak should take up the offer, Elison's testimony could shed much light on the events surrounding the sale of the medical centre land at Tel Aviv to Kupa Holim.

Elison, who resigned from Solel Boneh about a year ago, where he had been head of its overseas projects company, was one of two businessmen interrogated by the police in connection with the Yadlin investigation. Yesterday, his lawyer, Arye Brauner, told The Jerusalem Post that following the interrogation Nitzan-Mishne E. Siegel told him that if Elison would tell all he knew about the Yadlin affair, Siegel would recommend that the Attorney-General grant him immunity.

"I recommended to Elison that he accept the police offer, and my client agreed. We are now waiting for an official notification from the Attorney-General," Brauner said.

Brauner stressed that the police had made the immunity proposal to him, and his client had not offered to turn state's evidence of his own accord.

He said that Elison would be able to give information concerning two multi-million-pound business deals in Israel and abroad, in which "public figures" in addition to Yadlin, had been involved. Both were "of public interest," he said.

Elison's information relates to two episodes, one involving transfer of funds to a political party, and the other to business deals abroad in which "central" political personalities played a role, Brauner told him last night.

Elison, who was interrogated by police three days ago, was formerly head of the Solel Boneh subsidiary, Harbours and External Work (Nemalim Ve'avodot Hutz). According to an informed source, (Continued on page 3, col. 7)

Ports Authority in a state of chaos Problem is too much money

IF ECONOMICS is indeed — as the classical economists once defined it — the study of scarcity, it is small wonder the Israel Ports Authority has applied so little of it to the investment of massive sums of capital during the last few years. The IPA — being a public corporation and paying no taxes — had, by the time Aharon Remez became its general manager in 1970, accumulated a huge — and embarrassing — excess of funds it was at pains to slot unobtrusively into its annual balance sheets.

The principal contribution to this embarras de richesses came from wharfage dues, a system of taxation of all cargo going through the ports, inherited from the British Mandatory authorities. As the tax is based on the value of the goods, every devaluation meant an equivalent increase in the Ports Authority's revenue from imported goods. Increases in freight, or insurance, or even in the basic price of foreign goods, meant an automatic increase of the IPA's revenues, as these were — and still are — based on the landed value of imported goods.

Total income from wharfage dues and from other sources, including portage, stevedoring and ship's dues, came to IL188m. in 1970/71. In 1972/73 they amounted to IL282.2m., and in 1974/75 reached a total of IL617.2m. Wharfage accounted for about 40 per cent of the total each year.

The large surpluses thus created enabled the Ports Authority to finance not only the purchase from Solel Boneh of the stevedoring company working as a contractor in Haifa Port, but also its own development budgets and repayment of the World Bank's loan for the construction of Ashdod Port. The authority did not need money from the national budget, although the IPA was required by law to obtain the Government's approval for its own development budgets. Naturally, under such circumstances, Government approval was not generally hard to get; and even disputed items could hardly be convincingly contested, as all the esoteric expertise was within the Ports Authority itself.

Egypt warns UN of 'overall war in M.E.'

UNITED NATIONS — Egypt warned yesterday of the prospect of "an overall liberation war" in the Middle East if a peace settlement was not soon concluded.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said: "Israel commits the biggest folly in thinking that its manoeuvres and eavesdropping will give it time to impose on the Arab world and on the international community an expansionist fait accompli."

He issued the warning in an address to the UN General Assembly. In his absence, this was read for him by Egyptian Ambassador Esmat Abdel Meguid.

Yesterday was the final day of the Assembly's general debate, in which prime ministers, foreign ministers and other senior cabinet officers annually outline their governments' attitudes towards international problems.

The debate this year has been unusually low-key, with little of the strident rhetoric that was a feature of the Cold War and decolonization periods and their aftermath.

Much of the work of the Assembly, which runs until December 21, now will be concentrated in its committees, with the plenum meeting irregularly.

In his remarks yesterday, Fahmy said Egypt continued to welcome the role of the U.S. and the Soviet Union in the Geneva conference and the participation of Europe and the non-aligned states in the search for Middle East peace.

But he accused Israel of intransigence, resisting all efforts aimed at returning the Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war and restoring the legitimate rights of Palestinians. He repeated Egypt's firm stand that there can be no peace in the Middle East without Israel's full withdrawal from all the occupied Arab territories and without the Palestinian people's recovery of its legitimate rights, including its right to establish an independent Palestinian state.

Turning to "bleeding" Lebanon, Fahmy called for the withdrawal of all foreign forces there, stressed the imperative of good relations between the Lebanese and Palestinians, and supported the dispatch of Arab security forces and the continuing efforts of the Arab League to make peace.

Fahmy then spoke of "the attempt at nuclear blackmail in the Middle East," mentioning reports that Israel possessed nuclear weapons.

"It is pertinent to ask why does Israel continuously and persistently refuse to accede to the non-proliferation treaty and to accept an international safeguard system?" he said. "This refusal is one more proof of Israel's lack of seriousness when it speaks of peace."

Commenting Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's service over the past five years, Fahmy said Egypt supported him for re-election.

Prison terms for Sepulchre pair

A West Bank couple caught on Tuesday having intercourse in the Holy Sepulchre were yesterday sentenced to six-month prison terms and fines of IL5,000 each.

The two are Habas Muhammad Abdul Halim, 33, a visitor from Jordan, and Louisa Margardil, 38, a Brazilian national living in Ramallah. In sentencing them, Jerusalem Magistrate Moshe Shalgi noted that their offence was very serious as it struck at the religious feelings of others and could result in a wave of religious friction. He was therefore not taking into consideration the fact that it was the first offence for each, he said.

The couple entered the church's Tomb structure, the holiest spot in Christianity, on Tuesday morning, hugged and kissed and then began to engage in intercourse. They were surprised by a monk, who called over a police guard to make the arrest.

ADL asks State Department to limit PLO envoy's travel

NEW YORK — The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has called on the State Department to order Shafiq al-Hout, a Palestine Liberation Organisation observer at the UN, to remain within the 25-mile UN district "in light of his previous flagrant violation" of his restricted visa, or face "immediate deportation."

Arnold Forster, ADL's general counsel, in a letter dated October 11 to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, cited a September 17 State Department letter to the League acknowledging that al-Hout has violated terms of his visa last spring. Al-Hout left the U.S. at the end of the last UN session but has since returned for the current session.

The State Department letter, responding to an ADL complaint about al-Hout's activities, declared that the PLO's New York office had been informed that al-Hout's participation in a Washington D.C. TV interview constituted a "public, political activity" in violation of his visa terms.

Al-Hout had State Department permission to travel to Washington beyond the 25-mile limit mandated by his visa, but no permission to participate in "public, political activity."

Restricted visas were issued to PLO delegates by the State Department in November 1974, after the ADL filed suit in Federal Court to either bar them from entering the U.S. or to restrict their travel. (JTA)

Goren inspects repairs at Machpela cave

Jerusalem Post Staff
TEL AVIV. — Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren visited Rehovot yesterday to inspect the renovations and repairs done in the Tomb of the Patriarchs (Machpela Cave) before it is opened again to worshippers.

Rabbi Goren brought with him a Torah scroll to replace one of those desecrated in the recent riots in the tomb — a scroll that he had first put in the cave when it was liberated in the Six Day War.

Goren will recommend a new prayer rota in the site when he gives his opinion on the case to the Prime Minister and the Defence Minister. He also toured the site of the Avraham Avim synagogue and inspected the renovations under way there.

Modern leaders led by Shlomo Hillel al-Muhtasib also visited the Tomb yesterday. They expressed their satisfaction over the fact that no changes were introduced at the Tomb of the Patriarchs "despite the rumours."

Hanita pipes water over Lebanon border

Jerusalem Post Reporter
HANITA. — When Kibbutz Hanita was established in 1938, it was supplied with water by the Christian Arab village of Alma el Sha'ab nearby. The water was brought to the kibbutz on the backs of draught animals.

Alma el Sha'ab's water source is now a victim of the Lebanese civil war, and Hanita has taken the opportunity to return the obligation by laying a pipeline across the border to supply the village.

According to Labour Minister Moshe Baran, who visited the kibbutz neighbourhood fence here on Wednesday, Israel may eventually employ as many as 500 Lebanese workers.

The original limit decided upon was 300, the minister said. But because of the increased urgency of the needs of the inhabitants of Southern Lebanon, Israel was prepared to find more jobs here as long as the need exists.

THE VOLUNTARY Defence Fund has received a donation of IL60 from fourth grade pupils Orit and Yonatan Nevo, of Kibbutz Gnosar. It was their second gift to the fund. They sent IL50 when it opened after the Entebbe operation.

Parties warned not to cut down on North Africans

By LEA LEVAVI
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The political parties in Israel should double the number of North Africans on election lists to the Knesset, Histadrut and local authorities, and should not try to create a numerical ghetto — unless they want to be boycotted by voters of North African origin.

This was one of the decisions reached after midnight on Wednesday at the end of a three-day meeting of the World Executive of North African Jewry.

The executive also called on the government, the Jewish Agency and other bodies to include more North Africans in all the public bodies of economic, social and political organizations.

Shaul Ben-Simon, chairman of the world movement of North African Jewry, had wanted the movement to seek membership in the World Zionist Organization and in the World Jewish Congress as an independent Jewish community of one million — half in Israel and half abroad. But he was in the minority on this point and after a long debate it was decided to seek membership in the world bodies through the World Federation of Sephardi Jews.

Ben-Simon had earlier pressed his movement to demand an independent place on the Zionist Executive. But it appears that he was in the minority in this demand as well, and the North African Jews will continue to be represented on the Executive by the single Sephardi Union representative. "The point of the conference was to call for real integration," Ben-Simon said. "It's time for us to stop being the subject of discussion in Israeli and Jewish forums and to start being equal participants. We don't want a North African or Sephardi ghetto."

The medical centre project along Derech Haifa, begun in 1962 by a group of American investors, mainly who intended to set up a medical clinic. By 1969 the group was seeking a partner to take it over.

In 1975, Soli Boneh, a participant as a partner, was drawn up, and a contract was established, repressing interests of the two parties.

However, much to the dismay of the investors, Soli Boneh withdrew from the deal on the heels of a Knesset vote on the project.

According to newspaper Kibbutz HaNahla, Boneh offered about a $200,000 "loan" to the project, which was to be repaid by the project's income. However, the project's income was not sufficient to cover the loan, and Boneh was forced to withdraw.

Minister replied: "This is a function of an Attorney-General's question of the cabinet matter for the cabinet."

Zadok told The Post: "We decided that Yadin is right to see the Attorney-General's opinion straightaway react to that opinion if it is a possibility that the cabinet may reach a decision on Sunday which would be to Yadin's interests, the of natural justice require cabinet has before it, not Barak's opinion but also reactions, if any, Yadin given every chance."

The source conceded the legal opinion been pre-emptive, Premier Rabin have laid so much stress Yadin's reaction to it before the next move in the cabinet. Meanwhile the Chairman Knesset Finance Committee Karmann, urged the government to consider "moral and public aspects of the Yadin as only pure legalities."

"I'm not saying I'm stand," he told The Post yesterday. "I haven't got a legal opinion. I haven't seen Barak's report. I demand, urge the cabinet limit itself to formal matters that can be proven in court, to moral and public considerations." Zadok had no similar opinion in Haifa on day.

Solel Boneh

it was Ellison who bore the brunt of negotiations between the two American investors owned the Tel Aviv project, Solel Boneh. Solel Boneh had withdrawn from and Kupat Holim bought the project.

Allegations in the media, charged that the price Kup paid for the project was excessive. It then been rumoured that the money found its way into the pockets of individuals in the transaction.

The medical centre project along Derech Haifa, begun in 1962 by a group of American investors, mainly who intended to set up a medical clinic. By 1969 the group was seeking a partner to take it over.

In 1975, Soli Boneh, a participant as a partner, was drawn up, and a contract was established, repressing interests of the two parties.

However, much to the dismay of the investors, Soli Boneh withdrew from the deal on the heels of a Knesset vote on the project.

According to newspaper Kibbutz HaNahla, Boneh offered about a $200,000 "loan" to the project, which was to be repaid by the project's income. However, the project's income was not sufficient to cover the loan, and Boneh was forced to withdraw.

SIMHAT TORA HOLIDAY STARTS TONIGHT

Thousands to celebrate at Wall

JUDY SIEGEL
The last few days of the year-end festival will be the first chapter to end and renew the year's readings and celebrations — that begins a new evening.

Thousands are expected at the Western Wall during the holiday, and dozens of Tora scrolls and tables have been assembled so they can hold services.

Thousands more will prolong the Simhat Tora hakafot (circuits with Tora scrolls) tomorrow night all over the country. The main Jerusalem event (aside from those in the ultra-religious neighbourhoods) will take place on the grounds of the Ma'ale school near Independence Park and Beit Agron. Beginning at 8 p.m., the hakafot will be attended by ministers, the Chief Rabbi, representatives of the diplomatic corps, new immigrants, tourists and the general public. It is being organized by the Tourism Ministry, the Jerusalem Municipality, the Religious Affairs Ministry and Hechal Shlomo.

President Ephraim Katzir has invited hundreds of young members of the Gush movement (which tries to create better understanding between religious and secular youth) to take part in second hakafot at his residence tomorrow evening, as he did last year. Thousands of invited guests — new immigrants and — visited the President yesterday, for Succot.

Settlers in the Tekoa region have invited new immigrants and soldiers to take part in second hakafot with them. About 30,000 people are expected to crowd into Kfar Habad to join Hasidim for their Tora circuits, and the dancing and ecstatic singing will go on late into the night.

Sarah Honig adds from Tel Aviv: Kikar Malchei Yisrael has already been decorated for the second hakafot which will begin there at 7.30 p.m. on Saturday.

The unusual note at the Tora celebrations this year are invitations sent out to Hebrew veterans, some of them survivors of the Arab massacre of the Jewish community in the city of the patriarchs in 1929.

Over 50,000 people are expected for the traditional outdoor celebrations and dancing with the Tora scrolls. Well-known cantors and choirs will appear and the city's two chief rabbis will address the public.

The conclusion of the Simhat Tora holiday will also be marked by hakafot at the Elon Moreh settlement in Kadum. Celebrations there will begin at 8.30 p.m. and the settlers have invited anyone who wishes to come.

Katzir patron of next Maccabiah

TEL AVIV. — The Tenth Maccabiah, to take place next July will be under the patronage of President Ephraim Katzir.

The international committee organizing the games will meet here January 10 to discuss final arrangements. Among the attractions of the tenth games, in which delegations from 32 countries will participate are the tennis and squash events, which will have special groups for athletes over the age of 45.

The Jewish communities in Britain, Australia and South Africa have announced that they are preparing teams for four new Maccabiah events: badminton, squash, mini-football and karate.

Valuables stolen from Jerusalem synagogues

Valuables were stolen from two synagogues in the Jerusalem area during the past two weeks.

Police have arrested two suspects believed to have stolen 20 sets of tefillin (prayer shawls) and an ornamental clock from a synagogue in Ma'ale Zion near Jerusalem. The value of the stolen articles was estimated at IL20,000. A Hebrew resident in whose house the police said they found nine sets of tefillin was arrested together with a 16-year-old from Jerusalem suspected to have been his partner.

A few days later "Beit Shalom," a Jerusalem synagogue on Rehov Hashomer, was broken into and another ornamental clock was stolen.

A HAIFA man will celebrate his 102nd birthday on Simhat Tora. He is Avraham Rukman, who was one of the founders of the Neve Sha'anun suburb. Born in Russia in 1874, he now lives in an apartment next door to that of his only surviving daughter, is still alert and enjoys reading a Yiddish newspaper.

Light rain on plain is nobody's bane

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Yesterday's rain on the coastal plain was much too light for the tradition-honored appellation of "yoreh" — and caused no worry to peanut and cotton farmers engaged in getting their crops in.

"Yoreh" — the first rains — should be accompanied by thunderstorms to qualify. And they shouldn't start until after Simhat Tora, when the dew supplication in the daily prayers switches to the request for rain.

The forecaster says that yesterday's heavy clouds will give way to sunny skies this week-end and temperatures are expected to be up.

But a change may be in store. Heavy rainstorms have occurred over Greece and Italy, and could lead to similar weather here. Israel's "average" weather allows for heavy rains by November.

If they come before, winter sowings of wheat and fodders tend to germinate early. Local weather lore also has it that heavy early rains mean, so the crops that germinate too early are likely to wilt before the springtime.

Lawyer fined for slandering judges

A Jerusalem lawyer who was found guilty of slandering all the judges in the country and vilifying the entire Israeli legal system was fined IL7,500 and given a five-month suspended sentence at the Magistrate's Court in Jerusalem on Wednesday.

Simha Nir, 37, was a candidate for the Israeli Bar elections in 1975. As part of his campaign as head of a list called "Law and Economy," he distributed a leaflet in which the court found libelous statements. The leaflet claimed that "the rot in Israeli society which brought about the Yom Kippur War has seeped through to the whole Israeli legal system... As usual the rot starts from the top — the Justices of the Supreme Court and the President of that court."

Nir pleaded his own case and brought up an original objection to try to stop the court's proceedings. He said that since the magistrate himself also suffered from his alleged slander he must disqualify himself as an interested party. But the magistrate turned down the objection saying that should he disqualify himself it would set a precedent by which Nir could never be tried.

World record in 10-km. Lake Kinneret swim

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Nadav Barzucha, the rising young swimming star of Kibbutz Kfar Hamaccabi, yesterday scored a hat full of achievements in the 12th annual Lake Kinneret swim, sponsored by the Hapoel Sports Organisation and the municipality.

Barzucha, who swam for the Be'er Sheva Hapoel Club, won the event, a 10-km. crossing from Ein Gey to Tiberias, leading a field of 21, including six girls.

In doing so, he broke the world record for the event, bettering the 2:02:25 time set by Mark Lampert in 1970, by clocking in at 1:52:15. He also broke his own Israeli record of 2:05:14 set in 1974.

The best time for girls was set by Daniella Wester, of Be'er Sheva, at 2:10:00. A Hadassah swimmer, she came in seventh at 2:08:51.

World drugs experts to meet here in March

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The International Pharmaceutical Federation is to hold a symposium in Israel for the first time next March. Dr. Eli Fisher told The Jerusalem Post on his return from Warsaw where he represented Israel at the world congress of the federation which was held in Poland last month.

Dr. Fisher said the symposium will be on "Drug activity, its absorption, metabolism and excretion." He said that except for the Arab members of the federation, the proposal to hold the symposium in Israel won overwhelming support from all the participants in the congress.

Ports have too much money

container "revolution," requiring a vast investment of capital, was a serious problem for the IFA. Containerization was the long-delayed industrialization of port work through the utilizing of cargo by packing it in standard large metal boxes, to be mechanically handled.

Ashdod was earmarked as the natural place for the development of a large container terminal, because of the large areas available in and near the port, and because of its proximity to the main population concentration — the Dan Region. The new motorway to Tel Aviv provided an efficient transport link to that conurbation.

The most modern and sophisticated equipment was purchased in the U.S. For the interim period, new conventional cranes of greater capacities — capable also of handling containers — were purchased in Belgium and installed.

In the wake of this activity, several private concerns also leased land near Ashdod Port and began constructing container-handling facilities.

Some nervous voices were raised to the effect that the strained labour relations in Ashdod Port (which will be dealt with in another article) might well jeopardize the smooth operation of such a terminal. The logical answer to this (and had there been less capital available, the only answer) would have been to attack the problem of labour relations with no less energy than that applied to the physical

World Jewish Congress report

Virulent anti-Semitic campaign by Orthodox Church in Greece

By SARAH HONIG

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — High-ranking members of the Greek Orthodox Church in Greece, and official church organs there have been engaging recently in a virulent anti-Semitic and anti-Zionist campaign associated in part with their church's campaign against the Jehovah's Witnesses.

This was reported by the World Jewish Congress, basing its information on research conducted by the Institute of Jewish Affairs, which is associated with the Congress. Similar anti-Semitic outbursts have been made in the past, but the sources were not church officials or official publications, it was reported.

The Central Board of Jewish Communities in Greece has officially protested to the Archbishop of Athens.

The institute noted that following the Cyprus crisis there was strong anti-American sentiment throughout Greece, sentiment frequently accompanied by an undercurrent of anti-Jewish sentiments. Recent attacks on Judaism by the Greek church, however, have been overt. It is not known whether the purpose is to heap abuse on the Jehovah's Witnesses by linking them to a "world Jewish conspiracy," or whether the attacks merely mask anti-Semitism and constitute a prelude to direct attacks on Jews themselves.

The institute pointed out that the Apostolic Deanship, the official publication body of the Archbishop of Athens, has recently published an article entitled "The Jehovahs — Enemies of the Faith and the State." It is claimed in the article that the "Witnesses are anything but camouflage for Judaism; they have, therefore, close links with the World Zionist Organization, which finances them generously."

The Holy Metropole of Kassandra recently distributed a circular describing the Witnesses as a "plague, a Satanic black cloud. He identifies their origin as 'nationalist Jews,' their nationality as

"American," and the organization which they serve as "Zionism." Their aim is cited as "the establishment of world Jewish dominion following the disappearance of all states except their own."

A circular distributed by the Metropole of Salonika shifts emphasis from the Witnesses to their alleged mentors — the Jews. The former are described as "victims of a dark, Satanic power... a Trojan horse in the heart of Christianity — the fifth column of international Zionism." The methods of "international Zionism," according to the Metropole, include "the propagation of malevolent teachings and the degradation of the moral and spiritual strength of nations."

The Athens daily "Ethnikos Kyriz" recently published a sermon which vehemently attacked Jews for the crime of deicide, for the creation of Communism, for the support of Hitler and even for the establishment of Islam in the sixth century by the invisible Jewish assembly, the Sanhedrin.

All this is apparently not without impact, the institute noted, and letters to Greek newspapers and periodicals are echoing the anti-Semitic campaign. Jews are blamed for everything from treachery in ancient times through various historical events leading to the present, and are frequently denounced for having failed to display adequate solidarity with Greeks in the Cyprus crisis.

Groups, and 5 individuals to receive volunteer medal

The President's Volunteer Medal will be awarded this year to three groups and five individuals for outstanding service in the areas of defence, education, immigrant absorption, youth, health and social welfare.

The award ceremony will be held at the Jerusalem Theatre on October 19, the President's Bureau announced this week.

Hilda Gurevich of Haifa will receive the award for her work in helping bereaved families in all sectors — including Jews, Druse, Beduin, Circassian and Maronites — around the country. She has been working alone, without the support of any organization and without fanfare.

Menahem Zaharoni has been working in education for decades, doing much of it voluntarily. He established Beit Elkan in Kfar Yehoshua, and headed it for 10 years for free. He established numerous schools and teachers' seminars, and, in addition to his job as vice principal of Haifa's Gordon Seminary, finds time to substitute for teachers on reserve duty in various schools — without pay.

A team of members of Moehav

Massot Yitzhak will be awarded the medal for their work in helping Georgian and Bukharan immigrants from nearby Ashkelon adjust to life in Israel. The 12 women visit with the immigrants, help them through the government's bureaucratic mazes, and have inspired the moehav's youngsters to assist the immigrants' children as well.

Garin Oded, the volunteer group working with youth in 10 development towns, will receive the award as a group. They number more than 100 towns and villages pre-arrange youth who help children in setting up community centres, as teachers' aids, and work with street gangs.

Jenny Aloni, Lucia Boehm, Edith Hymen and Helen Levinger will receive the award as a group for their service in the area of health. They have worked together at the Be'er Ya'acov mental hospital, adopting patients — especially ones who have no families.

Yaelita Yizels and Ziva Uzan — mother, daughter and granddaughter from Be'er Ya'acov — will receive the award for their service in social welfare activities, including working with the aged, helping mothers of large families, and lending a helping hand to various neighbourhood projects and activities.

London cricketers play in Beersheba tomorrow

By JACK LEON

Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — London's highly-rated Harrow Cricket Club was due here last night for a five-match tour, which starts tomorrow with a match against Southern Israel at Beersheba. Wickets will be pitched at 9.30 a.m.

Joining Harrow as guest-player is the famous Worcester and England all-rounder Basil D'Oliveira, who has spent the past fortnight coaching in Israel. He will be only the second world-class cricketer to play in this country, following England's Ken Barrington, here in 1968 with the Bournemouth 8705 Club.

The Harrow contingent, led by Geoffrey Davis and Henry Pinkus, consists of some 15 players and nearly 40 supporters. The club's first visit was in 1972, and it is the only non-Jewish side among the dozen overseas cricket teams to have toured Israel to date.

South, which will be captained tomorrow by Danny Rhonkar, four years ago dramatically defeated Harrow by just one run in Beersheba, the Londoners' only loss in their seven-match itinerary (of the remaining fixtures, five were won and the other drawn).

Harrow's remaining games are: October 18 — vs. Central Israel at Ashdod, October 23 — vs. Northern Israel at Be'er Ya'acov, October 28 — vs. Israel at Be'er Ya'acov, October 29 and 30 vs. Israel's national team at the Tel Aviv University sports stadium.

Weekend rugby

Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

Four teams take the field tomorrow in rugby cup matches at the Hebrew University's Givat Ram stadium and Tel Aviv University's Ramat Aviv campus. Both games kick off at 3 p.m., with the Jerusalem team hosting Kibbutz Haogen-Nir Elitah, and Holon-Naan the guests of the Tel Avivians.

The teams are competing in the cup's southern section, and apart from Haogen, which scored a bruising 66-0 league win over Haifa a fortnight ago, will still be feeling their way in their first official games of the season.

Israelis at world amateur golf meet

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Israel lies 30th among the 38 countries participating in the Eisenhower Trophy, the world amateur golf championships, which started on Wednesday in Fenix, Portugal.

Playing on a windy, wet and difficult course, with a 75 par, Israel's Laurie Beer and Barry Mandel each returned first rounds of 80 with Bing Eling third best with an 88. This brought Israel's score to 248. South Africa and England lead the championship after the first of the four rounds, with equal scores of 218.

But this was not all. As such an arrangement — a handling facility in the main port and a terminal in the Kishon — was not satisfactory, the IFA has begun, again at enormous cost, to reclaim land from the sea in the area between the main harbour and the auxiliary Kishon harbour. There it plans, incredible though it may seem, another fully-equipped container terminal.

Containerization of cargo has, in other countries, saved port great lengths of quayside, because the throughput per metre of quay goes up about tenfold. The land area required at the quayside for the handling of containers is, however, far greater than that needed for conventional cargo. In containerized ports in Europe and the U.S. it is common to see conventional quays deserted or turned to other uses, such as fishing or yachting.

The container facility built in Ashdod could serve this country adequately for many years to come. But rather than confront the human problems entailed in its operation, the Ports Authority is lavishly investing capital in duplicating such facilities in the wrong part of the country.

'Mme Mao executed' Peking officials mum as coup rumours circulate

PEKING. — Chinese officials continued to withhold all comment yesterday on the clouded political situation here as rumours spread about an unsuccessful coup attempt led by Chiang Ching, the widow of Mao Tse-tung, and others, against the new Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng.

One report said that Mme. Chiang and three far-leftist associates had been arrested, and a correspondent from Tokyo claimed they had been executed. Mme. Chiang, Party Vice-Chairman Wang Hsing-wen, Vice-Premier Chang Chun-chiao, and Politburo Member Yao Wen-yuan have not been seen for several days.

"The Times" of London carried a Peking report yesterday which suggested that the personal bodyguard of Hua Kuo-feng may have carried out the arrest of the four radical leaders while they were forging the late Mao Tse-tung's testament.

The newspaper said that the four, and possible a score of others, were rounded up by Hua's personal security forces while "the plotters were preparing a forgery to put Chiang Ching into the Party chairmanship to succeed her husband."

The source for the story was credited to a "senior Chinese official."

"The Times" also said that among the alleged conspirators listed by the same official were Mao's nephew, Mao Yuan Hsin, and Culture Minister Yu Hui-jung, a well-known musician and close collaborator with Mme. Chiang in creating "revolutionary modern operas."

"All conspirators were placed under house arrest," the report said. Meanwhile, Hua was believed consolidating his position at an important meeting in Peking yesterday. But official Chinese media remained silent both on Hua's new position and the meeting.

Japan's Kyodo News Agency reported that scores of thousands were seen outside Peking's Great Hall of the People on Wednesday night. And in Taipei, a Nationalist Chinese analyst said members of the Communist Party Central Committee had begun gathering in Peking on Tuesday.

There was no indication whether the reported meeting was called merely to approve Hua's position, or to grapple with continued political infighting over the succession to Mao.

The Taipei analyst, Kuo Chien-huei, deputy director of Taiwan's Institute of International Relations, calculates that 38 to 40 per cent of the 319 Central Committee members, including 124 alternates, are radicals who support Mme. Chiang.

He said 60 per cent are moderate or political veterans and military leaders certain to back Hua.

This is the long-lost mummy of Queen Tiye, the mother-in-law of the beautiful Queen Nefertiti, University of Michigan scientists said on Wednesday. The remains of Queen Tiye were originally discovered in Egypt's Valley of the Kings in 1898. But scientists of the time didn't know that the mummy was important, and the location of the mummy was lost. An Egyptian Museum curator found her again two years ago, and asked the U.S. university scientists to seek an identification.

Ford cleared of misusing campaign funds

WASHINGTON. — Special Water-gate prosecutor Charles Ruff yesterday cleared President Gerald Ford of any wrongdoing in connection with campaign finances in his home country while he was in Congress.

The matter has now been closed, and counsel for the President has been so advised," Ruff said in a two-page statement issued to reporters.

Ruff said Clarence M. Kelley, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, on July 15 cleared the Justice Department of "information concerning alleged misuse of political contributions" by Ford during the period from 1964 to early 1974.

That information "concerned a previously unreported allegation that political contributions from certain named unions had been transmitted to political committees in Kent County, Michigan, with the understanding that they would be passed on to Mr. Ford for his personal use," the statement said.

Ruff identified the source on the allegation only as "an individual who had recently become aware of the underlying information." He said the individual took the allegation to an FBI agent.

Ford represented the Grand Rapids, Michigan, area in Congress for more than 25 years until he succeeded disgraced Vice-President Spiro Agnew in late 1973. In August 1974, he succeeded Richard Nixon as President.

Ford, meanwhile, said yesterday that if he is elected on November 2 he will want Henry Kissinger to remain as Secretary of State. The President was asked by ABC's Barbara Walters in a telephone interview whether he was urging Kissinger to stay on after the election.

"I would want Henry Kissinger, because of the success of our foreign policy and the close working relationship that we have to stay on as Secretary of State in the next four years," Ford replied.

U.S. moves to deport former war criminals

WASHINGTON. — The U.S. Government has begun deportation proceedings against three elderly immigrants, accusing them of taking part in World War II Nazi massacres in occupied Lithuania and Latvia.

The Justice Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) said on Wednesday "it was the first time the Government had taken such action on its own initiative. The charges against the three were drawn up after investigations in Israel."

The three men were named as Bronius Kamniskas, a 73-year-old Lithuanian who now lives in Hartford, Connecticut; Boleslavs Malinkovskis, 72, a Latvian from New York City; and 65-year-old Karlis Dambors, also Latvian, from Baltimore.

The INS ordered them to appear at hearings to argue their case against deportation for concealing alleged war crimes when they applied for entry into the U.S.

Latvia and Lithuania are now part of the Soviet Union, but the INS did not say to which country they might be deported.

Kamniskas was accused of taking part in the shooting of 200 Jews and 60 children, and the selection of another 40 Jews for execution.

Malinkovskis was alleged to have been a policeman for the Germans in 1941 and 1942, and DeLaurs was said to have been involved in the shooting of Jews in the Latvian capital of Riga.

Immigration officials have previously said they are working on over 90 cases involving people living in the U.S. and suspected of committing war crimes in Europe.

(Reuter)

The Jerusalem Post Correspondent in Washington adds: Andrija Artukovic, 76, who lives in California, is another war criminal who may be extradited in the near future, according to a report in the "Chicago Tribune."

The newspaper writes that Artukovic was Minister of Interior in the Croatian government formed during World War II by the Nazis and was responsible for the killing of 8,000 Serbs, Jews and gypsies between 1941 and 1945.

Artukovic managed to enter the U.S. on a forged tourist visa. The request for extradition was filed in March 1961 by the Communist government in Yugoslavia, but the U.S. refused on the grounds that his crimes were "political."

Israelis to testify in Nazi crimes trial

ROHRMUND, The Netherlands. — Four former Nazi camp inmates from Israel and one from West Germany will testify in a war crimes trial against a Dutchman beginning on November 22, a court spokesman said here yesterday.

Lambertus Loffen, a 58-year-old former member of the German S.S., was arrested last August on charges of having taken part in the killing of Polish Jews in the Bobruisk Nazi camp in former White Russia when he was a camp guard there during World War II.

The four Israeli witnesses, Moshe Mann, Shraga Shohat, Menachem Sholom and Yehoshua Ben-Zion, and the West German Isaac Wassers, were imprisoned in Bobruisk.

1976 Nobel prizes awarded to economist, 2 medical research

STOCKHOLM. — Two American medical researchers and an American economist yesterday were awarded the 1976 Nobel prizes in medicine and economics.

The Royal Caroline Institute announced that the medicine prize was awarded to Prof. Baruch S. Blumberg of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and Prof. D. Carleton Gajdusek of the National Institute for Neurological Disorders at Bethesda, Maryland, "for their discoveries concerning new mechanisms for the origin and dissemination of infectious diseases."

The Swedish Royal Academy of Science awarded the economics prize to Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago, a 64-year-old native of Brooklyn, New York, who also writes a weekly column for "Newsweek" magazine.

Friedman was honored "for his achievements in the fields of consumption analysis, monetary history and theory and for his demonstration of the complexity of stabilization policy," the academy said.

Friedman said he was pleased to receive the award, but added that "it is not the pinnacle of my career. I would not want a professional judgement of my scientific work to be of those seven people who selected me for the award."

Friedman is perhaps the foremost American exponent of the monetarist school of economics, which maintains that the economic cycle is determined more by money supply and interest rates than by fiscal policy. His philosophy is generally associated with laissez-faire or hands-off policy in regard to business and trade. Politically, it is aligned with conservative policies.

While Friedman has declined to serve officially in Washington, his influence has been felt there, especially in the administration of former President Richard Nixon, and in the presidential candidacy of Sen. Barry Goldwater, Republican-Arizona.

Both Dr. Blumberg and Gajdusek did their prize-winning research while on the staffs of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, according to NIH Director Dr. Donald Fredrickson.

Blumberg discovered the "AG" antigen, a protein related to the virus which causes hepatitis. Dr. Fredrickson said the discovery has led to a test that is now widely used to detect the presence of hepatitis in the blood of potential blood donors.

Gajdusek's work began when his interest in anthropology took him to New Guinea to study the primitive, cannibalistic Fore tribe, according to Dr. Donald Tower, also of Bethesda. The Fore tribe suffered from a disease peculiar to it called "kuru," a mental disorder that plagued generations after generations.

Gajdusek, 53, began to suspect that the disease was passed on when the cannibals ate the brains of their dead. He proved it by giving the disease to chimpanzees by injecting them with human brain material from dead tribesmen.

Gajdusek discovered that the cause of the disease was a class of "slow virus" which lay dormant for periods of time before a progressive degeneration of and nervous system. He was to persuade the Fore to give up cannibalism, and this has been almost eliminated.

Blumberg, a graduate of University, has been in medical genetics at the Cancer Research of the University of Philadelphia since 1956. He is a Harvard graduate, a professor at the Bethesda since 1958.

The economics prize, awarded to Friedman, was the 1968 to mark the 50th anniversary of his birth. Friedman, 64, was born in Brooklyn, New York, and has been given since 1960 income from a $2m. fund.

All the prizes this year were cash awards of $160,000 each, plus a diploma and a certificate of honor.

The Washington Post and Times Herald said the prizes were awarded in all or parts of the U.S. reported three dozen elderly persons so far after their inoculation.

But a Federal doctor said the deaths, except three in New York, "are not related to the inoculation." That is, he said, "the normal number of deaths among older persons who are not vaccinated."

Federal officials at the Disease Control ended an 18-hour investigation in Washington with no answer yet to persons in their 70s all heart attacks, shortly after shots at one clinic.

But a CDC statement said there is no evidence that the deaths were caused by the shots. Dr. David Sencer, CDC head and of the Federal effort, said shots should be continued.

One man died in the inoculation of small arms began shortly before mid-Wednesday and continued morning yesterday, the CDC said.

The Turks said the shoot when Turkish border guards engaged someone approaching the border. The intruder on the Turks who fired the shot, said, and the fire then continued into the night, the CDC said.

Amin blames U.K. — Jerusalem Post Correspondent LONDON. — President Idi Amin has blamed Britain for the bad relations between Uganda and the U.K. in a report quoted by the "New York Times."

Minister said, in comments is a ludicrous allegation of "Africa's last days." Even since Entebbe, he has his previously precarious position with manifest impunity. I should be relieved that he seems fit to blame the poor, Mrs. Dora Bloch.

GUNMEN. — Terrorist killed a middle-aged man outside his home in the Dublin's turbulent County Wick late Wednesday night. The man's son, who was in his car when his father was shot, was badly wounded. Automatic weapons fire from a nearby hedge, a spokesman said.

Thai regime clamps down on unrest

BANGKOK. — It may be 12 years before full democracy is restored in Thailand, according to a plan outlined by Prime Minister Tanin Kraivixien.

"We have to go back to the ABCs of democracy," Tanin told a nationwide audience on Wednesday night.

He presented a plan for Thailand's political future under which the military would back up the soon-to-be formed civilian government for four years and the organs of government gradually would move toward a parliamentary system over the next 12 years.

The military regime yesterday ordered all schools shut down and continued to confiscate allegedly communist literature and portraits of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Police stopped and searched all vehicles moving through the city Wednesday night as part of a strictly enforced curfew. (AP, Reuter)

Refugee in some shacks. When they refused to surrender, the police flushed them out with teargas grenades.

The camp was built in 1957 to house Moluccan soldiers who fought in the Dutch East Indies army before Indonesia's independence. The local mayor had ordered the police to clear the last Moluccan families from the camp so that modern housing could be provided for them.

But the Moluccans said they saw the change of accommodation as an unwanted attempt to integrate them into the Dutch way of life.

Spanish right calls 'March on Madrid'

MADRID. — In a direct challenge to the Spanish government, the 500,000-member Confederation of Civil War Veterans yesterday called on the Spanish people to join in a right-wing rally marking the first anniversary of dictator Francisco Franco's death.

The appeal was the first official confirmation of reports that right-wing groups have started mobilizing Franco loyalists throughout the country for what some of them have referred to as a "March on Madrid" on the November 20 anniversary.

The veterans said the "obligatory" acts planned by the government for the occasion will not be enough. It said there must be an "act of national affirmation in the face of separatism, class struggle, political parties, foreign interference, the destruction of (Franco's) state and terrorism." It added:

"The veterans, led by Falangist chief Jose Antonio Giron, also served notice that they would ignore a ban on the gathering, which they plan to hold in front of the Royal Palace here."

White Rhodesian opposition wants role in talks

SALISBURY. — Rhodesia's two white political opposition groups, excluded from the Rhodesia conference in Geneva, said yesterday they wanted to take part in the process of bringing black rule to the country.

Delegations from the minority white government of Premier Ian Smith and the three major African nationalist movements have been invited to the conference to set up an interim government to lead Rhodesia to independence under majority rule.

A spokesman for the moderate white Rhodesia Party said, "We were not expecting to be invited to this conference. However, we are looking for a place in the interim government and representation at a constitutional conference still to be called."

Fat Bashford, president of the multiracial Centre Party, said Britain refused to invite white parties other than the ruling Rhodesia Front because they were not represented in Parliament. The front holds all 50 white seats in Parliament.

Black Rhodesian nationalists still in detention and guerrilla representatives are to be included in the delegation of one group invited to the talks.

The African National Council (ANC) faction led by Bishop Abel Muzorewa announced on Wednesday following a six-hour meeting of its national executive that its delegation would include people from the external wing, some detainees and "representatives of freedom fighters."

Meanwhile, the escalating guerrilla war has claimed seven more lives in recent days, including two Rhodesian soldiers, Salisbury security forces headquarters announced yesterday.

80 Bolivians die when plane crashes into crowd

SANTA CRUZ, Bolivia. — A U.S. based cargo plane with a three-man American crew crashed on takeoff Wednesday from Santa Cruz International airport and hit a school, a hospital and a housing area before careening into a line of people waiting to buy kerosene, killing more than 80.

Bolivian radio said at least 80 persons were killed when the overloaded plane with only the crew aboard crashed about 200 metres from the airport runway.

The Bolivian aeronautics board said the plane arrived on Wednesday from Miami, Florida, with general cargo and had just taken off from Santa Cruz's El Trompillo airport for the return flight to Miami when it crashed at 1:30 p.m.

All three crewmen were killed, an aeronautics board official said. Over 70 other victims were standing in line to buy kerosene when the flaming plane hit them, he said, adding that the plane was "totally destroyed." The dead also included at least a dozen schoolchildren and several athletes training at a stadium nearby, the observer said.

Handling the Yadlin case

IN THE ABSENCE OF EVIDENCE to the contrary, it must be assumed that the intentions of the authorities were entirely honourable in the manner of their handling of the Asher Yadlin case.

The spate of accusations against the Governor-designate of the Bank of Israel, relating to his conduct as head of Kupat Holim, had created an embarrassing dilemma. Mr. Yadlin was to take up his new official duties on November 1, yet it was plain that he could not begin to discharge them with a huge cloud of suspicion hanging over his head.

The incumbent, Mr. Sanbar, had let it be known that he would not agree to extend his tenure by so much as one day, and there was no provision for the temporary replacement of the Governor by a deputy. At the same time it was inconceivable that the country would suddenly be left without a chief executive for its central bank.

A deadline thus had to be met, which was only three weeks away. Within that short period of time, it was believed, Mr. Yadlin had either to be cleared of the charges or to be clearly implicated, and the cabinet had to make up its mind whether to confirm his appointment or to seek another suitable candidate. The police investigation therefore had to be carried out as expeditiously as possible.

And indeed it was, with a haste that was not only great but almost unseemly. Mr. Yadlin was grilled for four consecutive days, and one day's interrogation lasted more than twelve hours, certainly an irregular form of procedure.

The fact that Mr. Yadlin submitted to such a gruelling form of questioning of his own free will makes little difference. Both he and his country deserve better. The underlying error, however, was the linking together of the matter of a Governor's appointment with the conclusion of the police inquiry. As we have suggested before, Mr. Yadlin should be relieved of the burden of his present nomination, and the investigation into the charges against him should be allowed to run its orderly course.

An interim report by the police was yesterday presented to the Attorney General, and is now in the hands of the Minister of Justice. It is still not too late for him, after consultation with the Minister of Finance, to propose to the cabinet next Sunday that it should follow the counsel of prudence advocated here in the Yadlin case.

Draconian tax regulations

IN A LAUDABLE ATTEMPT to catch all the elusive tax evaders, the revenue authorities can sometimes overshoot the mark, making life unnecessarily hard for those who do obey the rules.

The requirement that public institutions ordering work from private firms should deduct from their payments up to 35 per cent of tax at source made sense when the whole economy was in boom, with profits high. Today business conditions are far from uniform. Some undertakings continue to overcharge, others are beginning to face fiercely competitive conditions.

Yet the 35 per cent tax is deducted from turnover, not profit; despite the fact that there may be no profit. Indeed the unfortunate company has to charge the public institution 8 per cent of value added tax (which it transmits to the Treasury) — and then it must pay a 35 per cent tax on that tax.

Building contractors putting up Government buildings (schools, offices, clinics) are allowed a profit of less than 10 per cent; yet 20 per cent of their turnover is deducted at source. It is true that the excess tax is refunded in due course, but only several months after the expiry of the current financial year. The question arises whether businessmen are able to run their accounts honestly under such conditions.

Of course a firm which cannot afford to make these payments may always ask its auditor to plead with the tax collector for a waiver of the deduction at source; and that waiver (if justified) is granted. But why should the law convert businessmen into supplicants?

For that matter, there is a clause in the regulations under which the tax official can refuse to refund the excess contribution altogether. He may, if he wishes, credit it instead to the company's tax account for the following year. Again, the auditor must plead for mercy.

These rules have a draconian flavour about them. They are particularly discouraging to new ventures, which are unfamiliar with administrative practices, and cannot immediately find their way among the tortuous procedural paths. The same fiscal objective can be achieved more sensibly and painlessly, now that all firms are compelled by law to keep books. The auditor should be requested to estimate what the profit of his client is likely to be during the year ahead, and tax deductions should be based on that.

This is roughly the system of the mikdamot, or monthly advances of income tax; and it is better than the deductions at source, which could contribute to paralysing business initiative — at a time when much more such initiative is needed.

Zionism without aliya

AFTER TWO YEARS of trying to work within the system, David Solomons — frustrated and disappointed — has quit his job and decided to work from the outside.

"The decision-makers in the Jewish Agency and the World Zionist Organization don't really understand aliya nor have they done anything to increase it," asserts the 32-year-old, London-born Solomons, who has resigned, effective today, as head of the English-speaking desk of the WZO's Tnu'at Aliya (aliya movement). "They were appointed for political reasons, not judged on merit or their passion for aliya... and few have any fear of being fired for not doing the job."

The best and the brightest young people who began working in the Agency and the WZO in the last few years for idealistic reasons — have left or are looking for other openings, Solomons declares. "They are disillusioned by the politicization of the organizations and the low priority assigned to aliya."

Solomons, whose grandfather David Solomons was an assistant to Chaim Weizmann in London and started the first "Palestine Express" newspaper there, immigrated in 1974 with his brother Steve (now director of the Tsavta club in Jerusalem).

In London, David took time out from directing, with his brother, the third largest fruit and vegetable retailing firm in Britain, and got active in fund-raising for Israel. By the time they left, they were both "crazy Zionists."

Solomons was hired by Uzi Narkiss, director-general of the WZO's Aliya and Absorption Department, to head the desk and represent the grass-roots aliya activists in Frustrated after two years with the Aliya Movement of the World Zionist Organization, David Solomons has quit. There has been a steady deterioration in the aliya content of the activities of ... the WZO's Aliya and Absorption Department, he told Jerusalem Post reporter JUDY SIEGEL earlier this week.

English-speaking countries. "Aliya is a revolutionary decision in a person's life. Our aim was to make contact between Jews in the Diaspora who were committed to taking the step and those in Israel who had already made it."

His office compiled a list of some 3,000 people who joined the movement and were — at least theoretically — planning their own aliya. Many of them were young Jews whose the WZO had brought here on subsidized tours. Once they returned home, they received a monthly newsletter produced by the office containing aliya news and information.

But Solomons found a steady decrease in the aliya content of the WZO seminar-tours and in the proportion of participants who were really interested in aliya. "Lately, I was directed by Narkiss to help organize heavily subsidized tours — costing only $450 for two or three weeks — for people not interested in settling here and with programmes rarely, if ever, mentioning the word aliya." They will be taken to museums, universities, and wineries and hear lectures on "The Future of the Negev." With both the tour and the plane fare subsidized, such packages have attracted many who just want a cheap tour of Israel.

NARKISS, HE SAYS, is interested in quick action and impressive-looking statistics. "I urged that quality and not quantity be stressed; that five people seriously interested in aliya are better than 25 who are brought here on a seminar-tour even though they have no intention of settling." The Aliya Department, Solomons asserts, has even begun to issue inflated figures on the number of people taking part in its aliya hagim (circles) abroad.

Solomons was troubled when he found that the grass-roots aliya organizations he was supposed to represent — including the Association of American and Canadian Aliya and Student Mobilization for Israel — were being neglected (SMI almost disbanded) by the WZO. Yosef Aloni, chairman of the Zionist Executive, Solomons charges, "personally ordered" that the AACA should get no shahak (amissary) and be forced to fend for itself.

Aloni's action, he continues, was part of the Executive chairman's plans to place a large part of responsibility for stimulating American aliya on the local Jewish federations and community centres. "But the federations aren't interested in aliya; they want more of the funds collected in Jewish communities to be spent locally and not in Israel. Their goals are at odds with aliya."

"Almogi," he charges, "is abdicating the Zionist Organization's responsibility for aliya, for carrying out the aliya ideals of Zionism, because the task has become too hard... too much of a political liability."

Even if the local Jewish communities were actively interested in aliya, they don't know enough about it to take over the job from WZO shlimim, he asserts. "As little as the shlimim know about aliya promotion, the federations know and care even less."

Solomons does not blame Almogi or Narkiss, but the political machinery that launched them into their positions of power in the Zionist movement. In his letter of resignation, copies of which he sent to "70 or 80 friends so they would know how I feel," Solomons thanked Narkiss for giving him "all the encouragement and independence within your power." But liberating Jerusalem (Narkiss then an IDF general, participated in the 1967 liberation of the Old City) was a small task indeed, compared to that of liberating the Zionist Establishment.

"Solomons' frankness in criticizing the system may be connected with the fact that he is not dependent upon the Agency or the WZO for a living. Independently wealthy and free of the Zionist Establishment, he intends to continue working for aliya privately and organize others who are "crazy Zionists" like himself.

David Solomons

He urges that decision of the Zionist organizations for professional ability, of party affiliation or the climbing up the political ladder. Government should once deliberate, for months if more, aliya during the economically troubled times.

INSTEAD OF organizing tours of Israel for aliya, he continues, should (for example) Jewish social workers rarely seen Jewish social workers in their home countries, to them the difficulties migrant neighbour development. Instead of taking Diaspora museums and wineries should bring together groups by matching motivated Israelis in fields.

"I'm convinced," Solomons concludes, "that there are and were Jews out the looking for something, come on aliya if they want it and shown the post leading a meaningful Jewish State."

RAMAT MOTZA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I was both surprised and disturbed by your brief report on a so-called sports centre in Ramat Motza (September 24). A check of the original plan submitted to the Municipality, or better still the material accepted by the Supreme Court would have revealed that:

1. The "individuals" concerned did at no time plan a sports centre but an entertainment centre.
2. The only possible connection between the proposed plans and sport was an idea to have stables for horses for hire — all these within a few dozens of metres from the nearest houses.

3. These "individuals" behaved in a manner which would indicate that they place themselves above the law and above all considerations for environmental rights of others.

May I also be allowed to point out that Ramat Motza is the one and only place in Jerusalem (and amongst a very few in the whole country) which was leased and developed, including roads, electricity, water and sewerage, solely at the expense of its inhabitants, without a single agora being spent on it by the State, the Municipality, the Jewish Agency, or in any other way. The population is made up mainly of salaried professionals, civil servants and workers who had hoped to bring up their children in a basically simple and healthy environment.

It is only thanks to the Supreme Court's action that we again have hopes to be able to raise our families in a quiet village-like atmosphere. PAUL YARDIN

RUSSIAN DUPLICITY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — Russia is agitating for a Geneva Conference to settle the Middle East dispute. Russia is, of course, very keen because she hopes to obtain the goodwill of the Arab countries by forcing Israel to withdraw from territory which has been associated, for the past 3,000 years, with the Jewish People.

However, Russia, covering an area of one sixth of the world's dry surface, does not mention withdrawal from territories she has seized from the Chinese Republic during the past 150 years.

I hope Israel never attends such a conference, because the dice will be loaded even more against her than at the UN Assembly. H. LIEBSON Ra'anana.

SPEEDBOAT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — With reference to your report of our encounter with the Egyptian speedboat off the coast of Tel Aviv, may I point out that we did not fire signal flares at the Arabs, but merely threatened them with the flares. After they left, we fired two flares to warn the people on the shore of the impending arrival. Tel Aviv. WALTER BELLAK

NEW YEAR GREETINGS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — We're delighted to see that our "New Year cards irritate Tams" (September 27). Nearly 20,000 cards, bearing a drawing of a praying Jew in talit and tefillin, a calendar of Jewish holidays through 1978 and greetings from American to Soviet Jews have been distributed. The fact that telephone directories are almost unobtainable in the USSR makes the assertion we took the names of addressees from these volumes laughable. The cards are sent to the brave "refuseniks" who publicly assert their demands to return to their ancient homeland.

TOURIST TAX

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — With reference to George Leonof's article about Eliat in the Midweek Magazine of September 28, I believe it is reasonable to have Eliat's guests contribute to its municipal budget with a tax, which should of course be a modest one. In any other way, the Jewish Agency, or the Bohemian spas — Carlsbad, Marienbad, etc. — which is the region I come from, it was accepted by all concerned that tourists should pay a cure tax. Y.K. UNGER
Haifa.

STRANGE PHENOMENON

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — It is strange indeed that, while for hundreds of years Jews took almost no part in farming or military activities but were famous for their skills in business dealings, the Jews of Israel have developed a marvellous agricultural and a marvellous military machine, but have made a miserable mess of their economic affairs. How can that be explained? SAMUEL STRAUSS
Avihayil.

CLEAN TRAINS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I cannot allow the glowing report of the "cleanliness of trains and stations" (H. Yostroff — October 1) to go unchallenged. From his letter, I can only presume that Mr. Yostroff has never had occasion to use the toilet facilities on a train. GERALD KATZ Haifa.

CORRECTION

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — We wish to correct your report of September 30, which should read as follows:
Professor Zeki Berk assumes the Vice Presidency for Research from Professor David Haseon. The Vice President for Administration and Finance, Mr. Menachem Zahavi, will continue serving in this capacity. BEN-AMI BINAY, Technion Spokesman.
Haifa.

VIEWPOINT

UJA and Jewish survival

RUMOUR HAS IT that Entebbe and the so-called "Good Fence" will be the main theme of next year's UJA campaign. Indeed, 200 UJA representatives had hardly arrived on a visit a few weeks ago when they were whisked off to the Fence and introduced to the brother of Yonatan Netanyahu. They were welcomed to Israel with an appeal published in the press which assigned the UJA the responsibility for the survival of the Jewish people and the quality of Israel's life.

One wonders whether the survival of the Jewish people and/or Israel should ever be doubted at all and whether fund-raising alone is really all that is needed to ensure it. As to the quality of life in Israel, not funds but a considerable infusion of immigrants steeped in democracy and modern life will contribute to its improvement.

On the other hand, the image of Israel that the fund-raisers create is indeed of the utmost importance to the future of Israel and of the Jewish people.

For years we have assumed that the enormous fund-raising effort in which the Jewish communities in the free world engage not only provides sustenance for Israel but also serves as a major means of educating the entire Jewish people.

The idea was that the marriage between fund-raising for Israel and for local Jewish communal needs created an atmosphere of collective responsibility which made this union acceptable — even though part of the money raised on the story of Israel's success and her needs remained in the local welfare funds.

Indeed, as Zionist activity proper weakened, the fund-raising campaigns became a substitute means for building bridges between Israel and the Diaspora. It is mainly through fund-raising meetings that Israel cabinet members, her emissaries abroad, and other VIP's and dignitaries communicate with Jewish communities. In the last few years, the UJA has assumed new responsibilities, such as publicity, exhibitions, and mass tourism. Its leadership deserves credit for thus stepping in.

BEING ONE OF Israel's main "agents" abroad puts a great responsibility on what the UJA does and says. Creating the right image of Israel in the eyes of Jews, young and old, is perhaps the key to Jewish survival.

Entebbe was, no doubt, a supreme effort of daring planning and unbelievable courage. The Good Fence is proof of Israel's kindness towards neighbours in great distress. But should Entebbe or the Good Fence be the major inducement for Jews to share their wealth with Israel? Can one educate a new generation to give in the light of either of the two? Can either form bonds of loyalty, understanding, and friendship between Jews here and there. Neither of them can evoke the kind of Jewish collective responsibility that has been the mainstay of UJA ideology.

Some say that Entebbe did anything but prove Jewish solidarity. It can rightly be claimed that Jews of other than Israeli nationality
